Alana Bartol and Bryce Krynski: all roses sleep (inviolata light)

June 18 – October 2, 2022

all roses sleep (inviolata light) includes an olfactory video that blends how bees and humans experience and use the land around us. Shot using ultraviolet video, visitors are invited to see the prairie landscape from a bee's point of view, and a scratch and sniff card expands on the pleasant and pungent experience of pumpjacks, grazing cattle, prairie grasses and wildflowers. As the solitary bee searches and dreams of a rose, the work is meant to conjure questions about our shared future.

Contemporary Canadian comics are created without limitations of subject matter, stylistic constraints and sometimes even without words at all. Comic Sans focuses on the limitless artistic side of Canadian comics and celebrates a broad range of approaches to storytelling. Some of the stories in Comic Sans are biographical or autobiographical, some are familiar and others have sprung from the imaginations of their creators. Comics don't need to be constrained within the square frame of a panel, and the work in this show expands well beyond the page. Comic Sans is a celebration of the endlessly creative medium of graphic narratives.

Manuel Mathieu: World Discovered Under Other Skies

May 28 – August 29, 2022

Montreal-based artist Manuel Mathieu is known for vibrant, colourful paintings that seamlessly merge abstraction with figuration. His work reflects on our intertwined lives, in which the boundaries between the past and present or the personal and political are often blurred. Sharing recollections that depict everyday scenes and familial bonds, Mathieu also blends into his canvases an interrogation of the complex history of his birthplace, Haiti. By unearthing the traumas of state violence, he addresses issues that remain as urgent today as they have been throughout Haitian history.

Curtis Talwst Santiago: Pay de Devil – Brang! Brang! – Pay de Devil

May 28 – August 29, 2022

This exhibition is for Curtis Santiago's parents and for all the parents of the diaspora whose traditions live on in their children. Pay de Devil - Brang! Brang! - Pay de Devil documents the stories about the Trinidadian carnival with which Santiago grew up. This exhibition celebrates the processions, stories and characters of J'ouvert, the start of Carnival. During this parade, bodies and faces are painted and revellers dress up as devil characters or Jab Jabs, who can be simultaneously frightening, joyous, antagonistic and dangerous. J'ouvert and this exhibition are a celebration of ancestors and represent a liberation from the constraints of the past.

Conjured Images: Spirit Photography from the turn of the 20th Century

August 20, 2022 - February 26, 2023

This exhibition features early examples of photos that have “extras” or ghostly apparitions, which photographers and sitters claim were not physically present in the room when the photos were taken. Some believed these figures were the spirits of dead loved ones and claimed to recognize friends and family. Others blamed trickery or common phenomenon like double exposure. Spirit photography was incredibly popular at the turn of the century because of changing technology and the rise of the spiritualist movement. The core of spiritualism is a belief that there is an afterlife—similar to this life—from which spirits can actively communicate. Many famous spiritualists like Queen Victoria, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Mary Todd Lincoln made attempting to convene with the dead a fairly mainstream hobby.
